SPECIFICATIONS

The Clean Carbo modular filtering units are used to clean and deodorize air polluted by welding smoke, gas, vapor, and fumes. Before the fumes enter back into the environment, the contaminated air is led from the extraction point through the duct to the "CLEAN" filtering unit which is comprised of a pleated pre-filter made of an electrically-welded galvanized frame which encloses the filtering sector of synthetic resin-primed polyester fiber. The extracted air is then run through a high efficiency filter with pockets made of micro fibers connected to a galvanized sheet metal frame. If the deodorizing or the absorption of chemical substances or solvents in the air is required (for example, during painting operations or when plastics are processed) the filtered air is passed through the "CARBO" unit which is firmly bolted to the "CLEAN" module. The activated carbon used in the "CARBO" unit has a specific area of 381,439 sq. ft/ounce and a volume mass of 31 lb/ft³. It is contained in cylinders made of micro perforated metallic net which allow easy change of the carbon. Thanks to its modular construction, the high efficiency of the filters and the remarkable capabilities of the active carbon, it is possible to optimize the sizes of the unit according to the amount of air to be treated. For best performance the Clean Carbo should be used in vacuum. Filtered air may also be re-introduced into the working environment to save energy.
